EU Business Regulation

A Business for Britain Briefing Note

When discussing the European Union (EU) with UK business owners, it doesn't take long for the inevitable bugbear of Brussels "red tape" to be mentioned. Surveys conducted by business groups like the Institute of Directors (IoD), and even the more EU-friendly CBI, find that their members are concerned by the volume of regulation produced the EU.

According to a 2010 House of Commons Research Paper (10/62): "The British government estimates that around 50% of UK legislation with a significant economic impact originates from EU legislation" and Open Europe estimates that EU regulation introduced since 1998 will cost the UK £184 billion between 2010 and 2020. In practice very few bosses ever have time to read even a fraction of the laws passed by Brussels that impact upon their business; a job they leave instead to lawyers, lobbyists and compliance teams who, accordingly, put up administrative costs. However, it is worth looking at the amount of business regulation that has come into effect as a means of highlighting the gross excess of EU detail that British businesses are contending with on a day-to-day basis.

Our research finds:

- In this Parliament alone, a total of 3,580 regulations and directives have been passed by the EU that affect British businesses.
- The total word count of all 3,580 regulations is over 13 million words (13,321,530 words).
- It would take a UK business person, working an average 40 hours a week and reading at the average reading speed of 300 words per minute, 92 days to read all the EU red-tape enacted since the current government came to power.

Background

Regulation, whether from Whitehall or Brussels, is regularly cited by start-ups and SMEs as being one of the biggest barriers to growth and competitiveness. The red-tape passed by the EU and affecting British businesses is particularly onerous. A report by Open Europe in 2010 found that, since 1998, regulation introduced in the UK had cost the economy £176 billion.¹ Of this, £124 billion, or 71 percent, had its origin in the EU. Similarly, an investigation earlier this year by Conservative MP Priti Patel found that new laws, regulations and rules from Europe had cost over £5 billion (or the equivalent of £9,500 every minute) since the start of 2011.²

In his landmark Bloomberg speech in January 2013, David Cameron said that the changes occurring in the Eurozone would be the driver for change in Britain's relationship with the EU. The Prime Minister argued his renegotiation would achieve "a new settlement in which Britain shapes and respects the rules of the single market but is protected by fair safeguards, and free of the spurious regulation which damages Europe's competitiveness."

This briefing note does not attempt to separate the 'spurious' regulation from the necessary. But it does seek to quantify the scale of EU business regulation. No entrepreneur could ever dream of keeping up with the volume of new directives and regulation generated in Brussels each month, many of which will affect their company. Small and medium-sized British businesses, many of whom count the EU market as a tiny fraction of their income, if at all, will find the cost of complying with new EU laws particularly onerous. This is why we welcome the EU Regulatory Task Force established by the Government and look forward to reading its conclusions.

Sources and Methodology

This research was compiled using the Official Journal of the European Union – only legal acts published in the Official Journal are binding. The L series of the Official Journal contains a copy of all European regulations, directives, decisions, recommendations and opinions that have been introduced on any given day. This paper analysed all regulations and all directives (both legislative and non-legislative) that were entered into the journal from 12 May 2010 (the day after David Cameron became Prime Minister) to 30 September 2013.

All of the regulations and directives passed during this period were analysed to determine if they had an impact on British business. Laws that clearly didn't set out to affect business (e.g. they focussed on the European institutions, justice, education etc.) are not included in this research. To determine if the remaining regulations/directives had an impact on British business the following questions were asked of each:

- Does it make specific and explicit demands on British businesses?
- Does it alter European grants or subsidies?
- Does it either add new, or alter pre-existing product or service safety laws?
- Does it alter copyright in the European Union?
- Does it change advertising law?
- Does it alter the freedom of movement for goods or freedom of movement of persons?
- Does it make demands on companies for data registration/transparency?
- Does it alter or expand consumer rights/consumer protection laws?
- Does it alter or expand employee protection laws?
- Does it alter the functioning of the Common Agricultural Policy, Common Fisheries Policy or the Common Commercial Policy?
- Does it alter company requirements when it comes to waste management/disposal?
- Does it have the scope to affect corporate taxation?
- Does it affect trading relations with non-EU countries? (e.g. by altering tariff rates or introducing new anti-dumping policies)
- Does it put additional obligations on a company? (e.g. changing notification requirements or changing financial transaction laws)
- Does it apply new requirements on companies to protect the environment? (e.g. reduce emissions)
- Does it change certification procedures?
- Does it explicitly set out to alter prices/alter the market?
- Does it alter laws when it comes to the transportation of goods or services?
- Does it alter the enforcement/responsibility of enforcement for pre-existing laws?

If the answer to any of these was “yes” then the regulation/directive was deemed to have an impact on British business.

Laws that focussed on any specific EU member state (aside from the United Kingdom) were not included. Laws that affected links and transactions with very specific organisations (e.g. suspected terrorist organisations) were not included.

While the majority of EU laws concern themselves with agriculture and/or fishing issues, these have a clear impact on certain UK businesses and were included in this study.

All laws were highly accessible and could be transferred to a word processing program for word counting. The most up-to-date Microsoft Word was used to calculate the number of words in each document. The word count of the whole regulation/directive as entered into the Official Journal was taken – including titles and headings.

In order to calculate the time that it would take to read the entire collection of relevant laws, it was taken that an average business person in an average working week can read a total of 144,000 words per day.³

Using this methodology, we have determined that there have been 3,589 new laws passed between 11 May 2010 and 1 October 2013 that affect British business. This equates to 13,392,652 million words, which would take the average British business person, reading at a speed of 300 words per minute, over 93 days to read in full.

It will take a business person 55 minutes every Monday to catch up with all the EU laws that have been introduced in the last week. Or they will have to spend eleven minutes each evening catching up with the laws that have been introduced since that day began. If they only looked once a month they would have to take a morning off to catch up (spending 3 hours 42 minutes reading solidly).

About Business for Britain

Business for Britain is an independent, non-partisan campaign for a better deal from the European Union. Launched in April 2013, Business for Britain's founding statement has now attracted the signatures (in a personal capacity) of over 750 British business leaders, including John Caudwell (Phones4u), Sir Rocco Forte (Rocco Forte Hotels), Robert Hiscox (Hiscox), Lord Kalms (Dixons plc), Julie Meyer (Ariadne Capital), Sir Stuart Rose (Ocado), Lord Wolfson (Next plc) and many more. The campaign's Co-Chairmen are Alan Halsall, who runs the UK's sole-surviving pram manufacturer, Yorkshire-based Silver Cross; and John Mills, Chairman of consumer products company JML Ltd and the largest individual donor to the Labour Party. The Chief Executive is Matthew Elliott, founder of the TaxPayers' Alliance and Big Brother Watch, and Campaign Director of the NOtoAV campaign in the 2011 Alternative Vote referendum.

³ Calculated as follows: 8 hours a day or 480 minutes (40 hour week) x average adult reading speed (300 words per minute) = 144,000 per day.

Case Studies

Case Study 1

John Biggin, Managing Director, TruckEast

www.truckeast.co.uk

“We are currently battling through a myriad of Red Tape in the form of European Union Whole Vehicle Type Approval (EUWVTA). Essentially, any modification to a standard vehicle - or if a body is built for a vehicle - has to comply with this new legislation.

“We fit extra axles to trucks and have done so for 20 years and complied with UK Construction and Use Regulations. In order to comply with EUWVTA, we have to go through an enormous amount of work and cost (about £10,000 per model variant) and have the vehicle tested and approved by Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA). We have been working on this for about nine months now.

“This nonsense has resulted in many small businesses folding. A small truck body builder in Wellingborough that had been going for 25 years recently closed down because they did not have the means to comply with this new law. The legislation is really aimed at EU states that currently have nothing in place. The UK has led the world with its Construction and Use Regulations, which more than cover what is required. The government should really have told the EU that we were not going to take the EUWVTA on.”

Case Study 2

John Kersey, Managing Director, Kersey Hairdressing

www.kerseyhairdressing.co.uk

“As with many businesses, hairdressing suffers from EU directives regarding health and safety. Adding to the long list of red tape, it was recently proposed that employees should follow draconian rules regarding what they wear at work.

“Hairdressers will be banned from wearing high heels and jewellery under nanny state proposals being drawn up in Brussels. The proposed directive orders stylists to wear ‘non-slip soles’ when they are cutting hair and bans wedding rings and watches as unhygienic.

“The plans will also see hairdressers ordered to prevent staff from doing too many haircuts in one day, to prevent ‘emotional collapses’. The bizarre rules will tell salon workers to have a regular ‘social dialogue’ to encourage ‘mental wellbeing’ in the workplace. These proposed rules have little or no bearing on day-to-day reality. Health and safety is important in any industry, but so is common sense and it’s time some of these bureaucrats employed some, before they put thousands of jobs and livelihoods at risk. The main difference is UK law retains enough flexibility to allow salon owners to make reasonable, risk-assessed decisions about the day-to-day running of their businesses while ensuring workers are protected. The EU proposals would mean a regime of coercion and compulsion, which is never good for business.”
